charming and striking one, Long before the opening hour the hall was filled

Half a hundred High School girls Half a hundred High School girls and boys occupied one entire end, and from time to time sang with young voices fresh and sweet the old time songs of the South that never fail to stir to enthusiasm. Six pretty girls in white stood upon the platform and pinned badges of honor upon the lapels of a long line of warriors, who to the delight of the audience were manifestly experiencing their severest campaign before the voileyed glances of the sextette. A feature of the evening was the announcement that Mr. J. Brockenbrough Woodward, High School student, had won the prize for the best essay on President Davis.

A State Holiday. A State Holiday.

Under a recent act of the General As-sembly the anniversary was observed in Richmond and throughout Virginia as sembly the anniversary was observed. Richmond and throughout Virginia as a State holiday. The schools and public offices were closed and the flag of the Commonwealth was holsted above the Capitol building. There were no special outward signs of a celebration during the day, the real and notable feature being reserved for the evening.

The exercises at Lee Camp were conducted under the auspices of the Daughters of the Confederacy. Prayer was offered by the commander of the camp, the Rev. Dr. James Power Smith, and then there was singing by the High School churus. The work of this chorus was one of the most enjoyable numbers of the programme. There were fifty-six voices, directed by Mr. Walter C. Mercer. Miss Julia Hening presided at the piano, and Professor Julian P. Thomas, principal of the school, was present.

Thomas, principal of the school, was present.

The announcement of the winner of the prize of $10 in gold, given by the Daughters to the High School scholar presenting the best essay on "Jefferson Davis," came early in the proceedings. There were fifteen competitors. A committee of the Daughters examined the fifteen papers and selected six, which were then forwarded to a committee from Lee Camp, composed of Commander Smith, Captain John Lamb, Captain Carlton McCarthy and Judge George L. Christian (charman).

Admirable Paper.

These gentlemen made the final selection and awarded the prize to Mr. J. Brockenbrough Woodward, Jr., of Barton Heights, a member of Senior A. I. Captain McCarthy read the essay and presented the piece of gold to the young man amid great applause. The paper was a creditable one that treated in a thorough and graceful manner of Jefferson Davis, "the most striking figure of the last century, a man of the bone of the last century, a man of the bone and blood of the South, and a true type of Southern manhood."

"Why should we wonder that the South loves him—the Father of the Confederacy?" said the young essayist.
"None but a misanthrope can help loving him for his spotless name, and his noble him for his spotless name, and his none self-sacrifice for his country. If his pure spirit could return to realms of earth, he could truly say in the words of Webster, I still live, for he will ever be enthroned in the hearts of the Southern people, fearing no usurper."

Gave Them Badges.

It was with great regret that Mrs Randolph was forced to announce that the crosses of honor had not yet arrived. They will come later, and will be presented to the veterans entitled to them aented to the veterans entities to them.
Last night they were given badges bearing a portrait of Jefferson Davis. These will serve as substitutes until the crosses come to hand.

The presentation of the badges was the prettiest ceremony of the ovening. Six young ladies—Miss Gordon, Miss Purcell, Miss Winn, Miss Totty, Miss Aylett, Miss

Randolph, and Miss Lightfoot—all members of the Richmond Chapter, stood upon the platform and pinned the badges upon the coats of those who came forward when their names were called. The hudlence applicated vigorously. tudience applauded vigorously during this charming and graceful scene.
